Project Better Dining

Problem

The problem that the Arizona State University community is facing is non-nutritious and poor-quality dining hall food.

Solution

When the contract ends with Aramark, Arizona State University should switch methods to a University-run food program so Arizona State will be able to control what food is being served, making it more nutritious and more enjoyable to the students.