Our idea is to create a program like the DART Program but different. Many students say that they have problems getting to class on time due to long walks from class to class across campus.

Our idea is called the FWLD Program. The FWLD Program would give all students an opportunity to get a ride to and from classes. FWLD stands for Forget Walking Lets Drive. Students would be able to purchase a semester-long or a year-long pass.

These passes would allow students to get to class quicker and stress-free. During the fall semester of every school year, it gets pretty hot in the desert, this pass would enable students to get a ride to class instead of having to walk very far in the heat.

These Carts would have certain very populated places on campus where they stop and let students off, you can think of them sort of like bus stops. These carts would also be expanded so that it can accommodate more students.
Why We Chose This Topic

We chose this topic because we have dealt with the long distances across campus trying to get to class first hand. It gets hot and exhausting going from class to class especially in the Fall. The FWLD program would make a tremendous difference with first, our stress to get to class on time and dealing with the heat during the school year.
How This Would Benefit Arizona State University

This new program would benefit teachers because their students' attendance, as well as tardiness, would be improved and students would be more productive in class.

This program would reel in extra money for Arizona State University in which can be spent on additional classes, materials, bookstores on campus, sports facilities, staff salaries, dining halls, dorms, etc.

Working for our community. This is ASU.
The FWLD Program

Join us on our road to better attendance, stress-free days, and avoiding long walks across campus

Have questions?
Contact:
Lexie DiGiovanni (amdigiov@asu.edu)
Issac Chacon (iachacon@asu.edu)
or
Cameron Anderson (cjande38@asu.edu)